NATIVE AMERICAN CHURCHES TOP $2.2 MILLION IN DECADE OF MISSIONS GIVING

Oklahoma Baptists Native American churches gave more than $2.2 million to missions-related causes in the last decade, according to statistics provided by the state convention's finance group.

"We celebrate the faithfulness of our Native American brothers and sisters in achieving this milestone," said Todd Fisher, executive director-treasurer for Oklahoma Baptist. "Because of their faithful giving through the Cooperative Program (CP) and the missions offerings, the Gospel is advancing in our state and worldwide."

The chart provided shows the 2012-2021 breakdown of how the combined total of offerings given through the CP, the Oklahoma Baptists State Mission Offering (SMO), the Annie Armstrong Easter Offering (AAEO) and the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering (LMCO) was allocated to fuel missions in Oklahoma, across the nation and around the world.

Churches among the 174 native congregations affiliated with Oklahoma Baptists dedicated a portion of their undesignated offerings given to their general church budgets, sending more than $1.5 million through the CP. Of those gifts, 42 percent of the CP dollars were allocated to the shared ministries of Oklahoma Baptists, including the support of the Native American Ministry Partnerships led by Emerson Falls, Oklahoma Baptist Disaster Relief, Falls Creek and many other ministry programs.

Fifty percent of these state funds were used to support the next-generation-focused ministry. Another 15 percent of the funds were passed on to support the affiliated ministries of the convention; Baptist Homes for Children, Hope Pregnancy Centers, Baptist Village Communities and Oklahoma Baptist University were among the recipients. The remaining 43 percent were forwarded through the Southern Baptist Convention (SBC) to support six SBC seminaries, North American Mission Board, International Mission Board and other SBC ministries.

Native American churches also gave over and above in CP giving, sending more than $683,000 to the designated SBC missions of SMO, AAEO and LMCO. These offerings combine with CP gifts to fuel evangelism, church planting in North America and beyond.

Supply Chain Issues Affecting IFC Campers

With the supply chain causing shortages in many areas, the IFC campers find themselves feeling the punch in their guts with food supply shortages. Specifically, the meat shortages have camp cooks seeking 'alternative meats' to meet the demand at the dinner tables. "How low on the food chain would one go?" KelliCo has put the meat alternative industry on tilt. The recent release of the KCo Skam by-product has caused a ripple effect on supply chains in both the oil/gas and pink sludge industries. The product has a symbol on its packaging because of its traditional use of the whole animal, thus making creative use of waste.

THIS is the first KelliCo product nominated for the coveted NAGPY - Native American Green Product of the Year award. But the raves end there for struggling ill-gotten gain corporation, Kellico. In an ill-thought attempt to expand its market beyond Indian Country, KCo falsely labeled Skam as kosher, triggering a recall. "The horse meat byproduct alone makes this label impossible," stated an inside source.

"They take all the best things away from us", stated disappointed IFC camper Mike K.

"I love this stuff.. We're asking KCo to appeal this recall, at least till after camp," stated IFC official VC, who only wanted his initials used.
